

Tie Plant Skills Day...

NNDC Creates Welcoming Display at GHS

The Education Committee of the Grenada Area Chamber of Commerce recently implemented a Skills Day at Tie Plant School. Members of the Committee held short seminars for students providing instruction in necessary life skills such as tying a necktie, reading a map, effective hand washing techniques, and how to change a tire. Committee Member Glenn DeHart demonstrates to students how to locate a car's spare tire and jack, procedures for jacking up the car, and methods for replacing the flat tire.

Alteesha Thomason, Nyesha Harvey, and Devonte Frost enrolled in NNDC recently redesigned the contents of the display case located in the front hall of GHS. The display shows a variety of memorabilia related to the Navy Cadet course of study.

GCTC Involvement in Community Activities

Rytavious Johnson and Channing Goss, enrolled in the Building Trades class at GCTC, display the wooden turkeys made for their school adopters.

The students at Grenada Career & Technical Center are actively participating in various community and school activities and projects. Involvement in these activities not only benefits the community, but also teaches the students to give back to their community.

The construction students at Grenada Career & Technical Center have been busy cutting out, sanding, drilling, and staining turkeys to display in community businesses that have partnered with our center as adopters in the High Hopes Program. The students used a pattern to draw the turkeys on the wood and then used a band saw to cut out the intricate design. After using electric and hand sanders to smooth the wood, they used a power drill to drill holes where candy suckers would be inserted to create tail feathers. Then they used spray painters to stain the turkeys and afterwards assembled the parts. When the turkeys were complete, the High Hopes Coordinators delivered them to the High Hopes business adopters.

On Thursday, October 31, 2013, all of the Health Science classes went to Grenada Elementary School for their annual Halloween clinical interacting with age three through third grade students with disabilities. The activities included playing games and painting faces. The Health Sciences students provided buckets full of coloring books, colors, bubbles, and playdough for the individual children to take home. They also provided cookies, chips, and dip for the students' enjoyment. The Health Sciences classes will return at Easter to have an Easter Egg Hunt and pizza party for these students. They have presented these two activities every year for the past seventeen years and all involved have enjoyed it greatly.
